Data obtained from third parties

Club Penguin Atake collects first- and third-party data through our website and game analytics, specifically Google Analytics. We use Google Analytics to track user activities on our website, such as behavioural data, heatmaps, and session replays. This data enables us to improve and offer our products and services.

We collect information on how you use and interact with our website. This includes data collected by first- and third-party cookies, as well as other tracking technologies. The goal of collecting this information is to determine the popularity of our products and services, optimise our website, improve security, and help our advertising activities (if those are currently running). It is important to note that Google Analytics 4 (GA4) does not log or keep IP addresses while collecting data. Instead, it uses IP addresses for geolocation during data collecting and then discards them.

Google Analytics collects first-party cookies, device/browser data, and on-site/app activities to measure and report user interactions on GA4-enabled websites and apps. Our goal is to gather insight into user behaviour, improve the user experience, and customise our offers accordingly.

Google follows privacy standards and anonymizes IP addresses by default in GA4. This means that the whole IP address is not saved or displayed in the reporting interface.

For more information about how Google collects and uses your data, visit the Google Privacy Statement: how Google uses data from sites and apps that use Google's services. For information on how Google protects your data, visit this website - support.google.com/analytics/answer/6004245.

Per your request, we will tell you via email: privacy@fullmoon.dev of the source and type of information we have obtained about you within a reasonable time after receiving the personal data, but no later than one month.

Cookies

We utilise Google Analytics cookies to collect behavioural metrics, heatmaps, and session replay data. Google Analytics collects website usage data using first and third-party cookies.

To prevent data collection across all websites, download and install Google Analytics Opt-out Browser Add-on.
